The Leather Bar

Join Ramóy and Roxanne in the LA&M Leather Bar. Here, posters and hand-written dress code lists mingle with t-shirts, histories and equipment culled from many of our famous and at times infamous bars and clubs.

A

Lobby & Uniforms Room

This building, first a synagogue, later an arts center, became the home of the LA&M in 1999. The donors listed on the east lobby wall helped to make that home permanent in 2004. From the beginning, the donations of artifacts, time and resources from the community has made the museum what it is today.

What Is "Leather?"

Here at the LA&M, "leather" is used as a broad term to describe those that participate in unconventional expressions of eroticism and sexual behavior. The term spans all genders, ages, kinks, fetishes and orientations.

Restrooms are located on the lower level, to the left of the Guest Artist Gallery.

Photos for private use permitted.

Please refrain from touching the artworks and artifacts in the exhibits.

B

Etienne Auditorium

The art collection that started a museum. In 1991, artist Dom Orejudos, who worked under the name Etienne, passed away. His partner, LA&M founder Chuck Renslow, was left in charge of Dom's large body of artwork, which included the murals that hang in this auditorium. They were created to be displayed in several businesses that Renslow and Etienne operated, notably the leather bar The Gold Coast and later the Chicago Eagle. Unable to find a location that would take the collection and keep it intact, he partnered with Tony DeBlase and created the Leather Archives & Museum.

The 164 seat auditorium is host to everything from film festivals and live performances to leather competitions and college classes. The venue also serves as a meeting place for several large leather organizations.
